ABOUT THE BOOK

If you are preparing for any kind of competitive examination, then going through the previous year question papers is one of the fundamental steps you need to take. This book is exclusively for those who are preparing for the UGC NET examination in Public administration .

This attempt is made by Aifer just to make 26 public administration PYQ's of the past 9 years including the recent Net Examination Cycle which helps you to chalk out similar questions which makes it easy for your preparation. Along with this you can also avail other e books in our website for the same purpose.

This book is a compilation of different question papers from various sources including the website of UGC NET. We kindly inform you that, we don't hold any responsibility for any mistakes in Answer keys, as the official key is released by UGC. Even though we have tried our level best to avoid all the mistakes and give you the correct keys, there is a chance for humanly error.

We are always happy to hear from you, if there any kind of mistakes or alternate opinions. We will recheck and will update as soon as we find any errors.

We wish to extend our sincere gratitude to everyone who contributed towards this effort.

Read the following passage and answer:

Perhaps the most important determinant of the integrity of a society or the prevalence of corruption is the quality of politics. If politics attracts and rewards men and women of integrity, competence and passion for public good, then the society is safe and integrity is maintained. But if honesty is incompatible with survival in politics, and if public life attracts undesirable and corrupt elements seeking private gain, then abuse of authority and corruption become norm. In such a political culture and climate, desirable initiatives will not yield adequate dividends. Competition and decentralization certainly reduce corruption in certain sectors. But if the demand for corruption is fuelled by inexhaustible appetite for illegal funds in politics, then other avenues of corruption will be forcibly opened up. As a result, even as corruption declines in certain areas, it shifts to other, sometimes more dangerous in which competition cannot be introduced and the state exercises a natural monopoly. What is needed with liberalisation is corresponding political and governance reform to alter the incentives in politics and public office and to promote integrity and ethical conduct.

All forms of corruption are reprehensible and we need to promote a culture of zero tolerance of corruption. But some forms of corruption are much more pernicious than others and deserve closer attention. In a vast majority of cases of bribery, the citizen is a victim of extortion and is compelled to pay a bribe in order to get a service to which he is entitled. Experience has taught most citizens that there is a vicious cycle of corruption operating and they often end up losing much more by resisting corruption.

Delays, harassment, lost opportunity, loss of precious time and wages, uncertainty and, at times, potential danger of loss of life or limb could result from resistance to corruption and non-compliance with demands. In such cases, the citizen is an unwilling victim of coercive corruption. But there are several cases of collusion between the bribe giver and corrupt public servant. In such cases of collusive corruption, both parties benefit at immense cost of society. Awarding of contracts for public works and procurement of goods and services, recruitment of employees, evasion of taxes, substandard projects, collusive violation of regulations, adulteration of foods and drugs, obstruction of justice and concealing or doctoring evidence in investigation are all examples of such dangerous forms of corruption. As the economy is freed from state controls, extortion corruption declines and collusive corruption tends to increase. We need to fashion strong and effective instruments to deal with this growing menace of collusive corruption, which is undermining the very foundations of one democracy and endangering society.

91. Which of the following are the determinants in the context of “quality of politics”?

- (A) Prevalence of corruption
- (B) Integrity of society
- (C) Initiatives and dividends
- (D) Reward for men and women of integrity in politics.

  - (B) Coercive corruption
  - (C) Extortion corruption
  - (D) Corrupt public servant

Read the following passage and answer:

Urbanization is a global phenomenon. Over half of the global population now live in urban areas and as per United Nations projection by 2050 about 64% of developing would and 86% of developed would be urban. This growth will be much in Asia and Africa and these continents have more towns and cities. The UN projection on India states that India would reach 40% urban by 2030 and over 51% by 2050. As per McKinsey projections by 2030 five states viz., Tamilnadu, Gujarat, Maharastra, Karnataka and Punjab will be more than 50% urban. Even as per 2011 census a quarter of the districts have urbanization higher than the national average. Village culture in characterized by common blood lines, intimate relationships and communal behaviour where as urban culture is characterized by different blood lines, unfamiliar relations and competitive behaviour. In present times, urbanization and migration of people from rural to urban area began with industrial revolution and is taking place on global scale. This results unthinkable size of cities. Growth of industries in urban areas, inability of rural areas to absorb growing population, better and increased employment opportunities, desire to have better standard of life, social mobility and fortune, increase in educational and health facilities, better civic services are to be considered as the basic causes of urbanization. These facts are cause of migration and the roots of natural increase of urban growth. Migration should not be considered only from rural to urban and it can be urban to urban too.

In India urban area characters are defined by the census. The Census definition formulated in 1971 continue to be adopted in successive census. As per the definition of urban is:

(A) Minimum of 5000 population

(B) At least 75% working population should be non-agricultural and

(C) Population density of at least 400 in a square km. Population land use, density, employment etc are broadly the components of urban definition with variations between countries. Most of the countries the population of 5000 to be called urban, but 200 in Denmark, Japan and China with very higher thresholds of 50,000 and 1,00,000 population respectively. Some countries use infrastructure and service provisions also criteria for defining urban area. Hence it is a problems of meaningful comparison at international level.

Increased pace of urbanization required better Governance of cities and towns. For better Governance various reforms required viz., property tax, E-Governance, public private partnerships, corporate social responsibility, citizen character, service level bench marks, local body ombudsman, strengthening finance commissions etc. These reforms would provide Good urban Governance. Green plan and budget, pollution control, air quality improvement and also necessary. 15th Finance commission in its report mentioned that specific tied grants to urban local bodies be given, particularly to million plus cities, to control air pollution.

91. Comprehension

At the outset, it is important to be clear that 'governance' and 'public governance' are not new terms and they come with prior theoretical and / or ideological baggage. The New Public Governance is rooted firmly within organizational sociology and network theory and acknowledges the increasingly fragmented and uncertain nature of public management in the twenty-first century. It draws much from networks and from organizational social capital literature within organizational strategy. It has the potential to draw from the relational marketing literature. It posits both a plural state, where multiple inter-dependent actors deliver public services and a pluralist state, where multiple processes inform the policy making system. The two forms of plurality focus on inter-organisational relationships and the governance of processes, and it stresses service effectiveness outcomes. It lays emphasis on the design and evaluation of enduring inter-organisational relationships. Where trust, relational capital and relational contracts act as the core governance mechanisms.

The New Public Governance has the potential to provide a framework to generate new Public Administration and Management theory and to support the analysis and evaluation of public policy evolution. The New Public Governance paradigm has inherent strength for the study and practice of Public Administration and Management. It combines the strengths of Public Administration and New Public Management by recognizing the legitimacy and inter-relatedness of both the policy making and the implementation service delivery processes. It provides a coherent conceptual framework from which to develop theory and research that can inform the practice of Public Administration and Management in the twenty-first century.

Comprehension

For an effective and responsive administration in India there was an imperative need for governments at all levels to reinvent themselves and redefine their roles and responsibilities and bring about reforms in all areas which have an interface with people. The public image of bureaucracy was one of inaccessibility, indifference, procedure-orientation, poor quality and sluggishness, susceptibility to corruption and non-accountability. The need of the hour was therefore 'to assure people of India of an efficient, open, responsible, accountable, clean and dynamically adjusting administration at all levels'. Governance has to extend beyond conventional bureaucracies to actively involve citizens and consumer groups at all levels, to empower and inform the public and disadvantaged groups and to ensure service and programme execution through autonomous local bodies.

Thus, the three aspects for reforms were (i) crisis in administration which was not people sensitive or citizen-friendly and hence the need to bring about reform; (ii) the need for a change in the mindset so that governing could be conceived afresh as 'governance' and (iii) transforming the administration through accountability-fostering measures.

Thus reform is nothing but an enlargement of opportunities for people in education, health, employment and general well-being .

Directions: (Q.No.96 to 100): Read the given passage carefully and answer the following questions that follow:

Historically, the district in some form or the other has been the most important unit of administration in the Indian Sub-continent. The British Parliament was the first legislature in respect of India in modern times and enactments created and gave substance to the district head of administration, known normally as the collector, the district magistrate or the deputy commissioner. In the post Independence era, when the economy diversified, and the pace of industrialisation and growth of tertiary activities picked up, other functionaries too gained in importance. But, even now, in most parts of the country, excepting metropolitan/mega cities, the collector is the most recognized face of administration, he is considered to be the principal representative of the government at the district level, who could be approached to solve all problems ranging from land disputes... and even to issues of family disorders. Though, as per the new administrative and development environment. PRIs/ULBs are the third tier of governments they do not totally remove the collector's responsibility in matters of local development. The collector still continues to be responsible for a multiplicity of tasks at the district level such as improving human capabilities, creating physical infrastructure, imposing economic opportunities for marginalized sections of society and facing challenges posed by disasters.

96. Which of the following functions were considered as primary role of the Deputy Commissioner during British Rule?
